documenting creative lives

We document creative lives.

Through honest, observational photography, we capture the people, processes and moments that shape creative work.

Based in Sydney's Northern Beaches since 2013, we work with artists, makers, creative businesses and communities who believe that the journey is just as meaningful as the outcome.

why we do this

We believe creativity has the power to shape people, communities and the way we experience the world.

That's why we choose to document the people behind the work, the quiet moments, the creative process and everything that often goes unseen.

As photographer Gabby Villalba and visual artist Miguel González, Kayapa brings together observation, storytelling and creative direction to help tell meaningful stories with honesty and care.

"We acknowledge the traditional owners of this land and elders past and present. We recognise Aboriginal people as the original custodians of the Northern Beaches. Aboriginal culture is integral to our understanding of belonging, community and care of the land."

We work quietly, collaboratively and with curiosity.

Rather than directing every moment, we observe, connect and document what naturally unfolds.

Whether we're photographing an artist, a workshop, a creative business or a community, our goal is always the same: to create honest images that feel true to the people behind them.

working together

Every creative journey is different, and so is every collaboration.

We work closely with artists, makers, creative businesses and communities to document the people, processes and ideas that shape their work.

Whether we're visiting your studio, following your creative practice or documenting an event, we approach every project with curiosity, care and a genuine interest in the story behind it.

The following experiences are designed as a starting point. If you have something different in mind, we'd love to hear about it.

Each collaboration includes a curated selection of thoughtfully edited images, prepared for print, publications, websites and social media.

We work primarily with natural light, creating photographs that feel honest, timeless and genuinely reflect the people and places they represent.
